

Opioid Overdose Awareness: Recognition and Treatment for the School Nurse

School nurses are the first responders in any student health emergency, be prepared when a drug related emergency happens.

The opioid epidemic is a national health crisis killing thousands of Americans every year. Unfortunately this epidemic has made its way to our young children and teens at alarming speed. Managing overdoses in school is vital to a positive outcome; the school nurse is an essential part of this emergency response. This educational program, presented by experts from Northwell's Garden City Treatment Center, will help you recognize and respond to an overdose. Participants will also be trained on administering Naloxone and learn about resources available in the community.

Garden City Treatment Center - Zucker Hillside Hospital

- Heather Hugelmeyer, LCSW, Program Director
- Lydia Makaryus, MD, Physician in Charge
- Danielle Piatkowsky, LCSW, CASAC, Social Worker

Date: Wednesday, March 14, 2018

Time: 4:00PM-4:30PM light refreshments served
4:30PM-5:45PM program/training

Location:

Long Island Jewish Medical Center
Teaching Center – Rooms 2&3
270-05 76th Avenue
New Hyde Park, NY 11040

Free Valet Parking available, Oncology parking lot, green valet ticket needed

For more information
please contact:

Debora Riccardi, DNP
718-470-3352 or
driccardi@northwell.edu

Register for this program at:
<https://cohenschoolnurseprogram.eventbrite.com>

Cohen Children's Medical Center
Northwell HealthSM